

2. Multilevel thresholding.

Now, let us consider that three dominant modes characterize the image histogram for two types of light objects and black background. This is called multilevel thresholding because we have used more than one threshold for separation of image information.

Multilevel thresholding.